

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The electronic commerce between a plurality of shop computers providing electronic shops on a network and a plurality of client computers used by users utilizing the electronic shops, is realized by using a transaction management computer provided on the network, which manages transaction information for each transaction currently in progress between one electronic shop among the plurality of electronic shops and one user among the plurality of users, and processes each transaction according to the managed transaction information.

15

20

25

30

35